

END OF FINANCIAL YEAR PLANNING

With 30 June around the corner, it's important to take time out to get your financial affairs in order. We've compiled some of the items that should be high priority on everyone's list.

Concessional contributions (pre-tax)

The annual concessional cap is currently $27,500. Concessional contributions include employer contributions, salary sacrificed and personal contributions claimed as a personal deduction. The concessional contribution tax rate is 15%.

High income earners, individuals earning $250,000 or more, will pay an additional 15%, on top of the standard 15% contributions tax.

Concessional contributions for this financial year and taxable income should be reviewed, to determine if a top-up is beneficial. The potential for a carry-forward concessional contribution strategy is also a consideration.

The concessional contributions cap will remain at $27,500 from 1 July 2023.

Carry-forward concessional contributions

Since 1 July 2018, any unused amounts in an individual's concessional contributions cap can be carried forward on a rolling five-year period if the individual has a total superannuation balance under $500,000 at the end of the previous 30 June.

For example, if David made concessional contributions of $10,000 during the 2019, 2020, 2021 and 2022 financial years, and his total superannuation balance on 30 June 2022 was $200,000, David could make a $90,000 concessional contribution during the 2022-2023 financial year (previous unused caps plus 2022-2023 financial year cap).

Non-concessional contributions (post-tax)

The annual limit for non-concessional contributions is $110,000, if an individual's total superannuation balance is below $1.7 mil, as at 30 June 2022.

The bring-forward rule, which allows the contribution of three years' worth of non-concessional contributions ($330,000) in one year, is available to eligible members provided they have not triggered the bring-forward rule in the past two financial years and their total superannuation balance was less than $1.48 mil, as at 30 June 2022.

Individuals with a member balance between $1.48 mil and $1.59 mil may be able to utilise part of the bring-forward rule.

For example; James aged 58, is starting to plan for retirement. He has $500,000 in cash in his own name and a total superannuation balance of $800,000. James decides to utilise the bring-forward rule to contribute the $330,000 to superannuation as a non-concessional contribution, in FY22-23, to invest in the share market. No further non-concessional contributions can be made in the next two financial years.

The non-concessional cap will remain the unchanged from 1 July 2023, however the bring-forward balance restrictions will be indexed by $200,000 from 1 July 2023.

Superannuation contribution work test

The work test is still a requirement for anyone over age 67 wishing to make a personal concessional contribution to superannuation before 30 June. To satisfy the work test, an individual must be gainfully employed for at least 40 hours during a consecutive 30-day period during the financial year in which the contribution is made, prior to the contribution being made.

Work test exemption (WTE)

Individuals aged 67 - 74 may be able to make additional voluntary concessional contributions for the 12 months from the end of the financial year in which they last met the work test, if they meet the following three criteria:

1. Their total superannuation balance was under $300,000 on 30 June the previous financial year
2. They met the work test the previous financial year
3. No WTE contributions have been received in a prior financial year

For example, Steven retired on 30 June 2022 aged 68 with a total superannuation balance of $150,000. On 12 August 2022 he sold his investment property to realise the capital gains in the year he was not working and had a lower taxable income, then made both a concessional and non-concessional contribution with the proceeds before 30 June 2023.

As non-concessional contributions no longer require the work test to be met, the work test exemption only applies to personal concessional contributions.

Superannuation pension payments

Pension payments and minimum and maximum limits should be reviewed. It is vital that accurate figures are obtained for each member as penalties may be imposed for over or under payment.

Superannuation members should keep in mind that the temporarily minimum pension will cease on 30 June 2023.

The standard and revised minimums are as follows:

Age	Standard Minimum	Revised Minimum
Under 65	4%	2%
65-74	5%	2.5%
75-79	6%	3%
80-84	7%	3.5%
85-89	9%	4.5%
90-94	11%	5.5%
95+	14%	7%

The maximum transition to retirement pension remains at 10%.

For example, Jane, aged 68, has an SMSF valued at $480,000 on 1 July 2022. Her usual minimum is $24,000 (5%) which she generally elects to draw as a single payment in June. However, this year with her balance reduced and minimal cash in the fund, she is able to take advantage of the temporarily reduced minimum of $12,000 (2.5%).

Superannuation contribution splitting

The pension transfer cap on funds in the tax-free pension phase has made it more important than ever for couples to maintain even account balances. Superannuation splitting allows a member with a higher account balance to transfer up to 85% of their concessional contributions to their spouse (the 15% contributions tax is deducted before splitting).

The receiving spouse must be less than their preservation age or aged between their preservation age and 65 and not retired. The splitting application should be completed in the financial year immediately after the financial year in which the contribution was made or in the same financial year if the account is being closed.

Consider whether you have met a condition of release

Anyone who has reached age 60 should be aware of the potential conditions of release that would allow them access to their superannuation and commence a tax-free Account Based Pension. As part of an end of financial year review, determining if a condition of release is met could provide significant benefits.

The most common conditions of release include retiring post preservation age and reaching age 65 regardless of work status. However, a little known condition is ceasing an employment arrangement on or after the age of 60. This condition is even met if you have two employment arrangements and only cease one while the other continues.

Government co-contribution

Anyone with an adjusted taxable income of less than $57,016 can take advantage of the government co-contribution, however the maximum benefit of $500 begins to taper down when their taxable income exceeds $42,016.

The government co-contribution is not available to individuals who exceed the non-concessional contribution cap or the total superannuation balance cap of $1.7 mil.

Spouse contribution

If an individual has an assessable income of less than $40,000 then their spouse is able to make a non-concessional contribution on their behalf and claim a tax-offset. The maximum offset is $540, where your spouses' assessable income is $37,000 or less. The offset reduces as the receiving spouse's assessable income increases above $37,000 and is phased out at $40,000.

Get in touch

If you would like to discuss any of these strategies further, please contact your Bell Potter adviser.

Jeremy Tyzack

Head of Technical Financial Advice
Bell Potter Securities

IMPORTANT INFORMATION: This information was prepared by Bell Potter Securities Limited ABN 25 006 390 772 AFSL 243480 (Bell Potter) for use by Australian residents. This information is of a general nature and does not take into account your personal objectives, situation or needs. Before making a decision about investing, you should consider your financial requirements and if necessary, seek appropriate independent financial, legal, taxation or other advice. This information is believed to be correct at the time of compilation but is not guaranteed to be accurate, complete or timely. Bell Potter and its related bodies corporate do not accept any liability arising out of the use or distribution of this information. Shares should be considered a long-term investment which may be volatile over the short term and may fall in price. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future returns.